STAFF bulletin

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

On the first day of term—January 3, 1961—Bernard Miles will discuss the Contemporary Theatre in London. Place: Hart House Theatre. Time: 4 p.m.

FOUNDER OF MERMAID THEATRE

LECTURES HERE JAN. 3

Bernard Miles, actor-founder of the Mermaid Theatre in London, is giving the second Edgar Stone lecture in the drama on Jan. 3, the first day of term. His discussion of the contemporary theatre in London will begin at 4 p.m. in Hart House Theatre. All staff members are invited to attend.

Mr. Miles, a former teacher, gave up the classroom for the stage 30 years ago. Since his first appearance as the Second Messenger in Richard III at the New Theatre, he has been property master, scene painter, stage manager, script writer, actor, dialect comedian, producer, broadcaster and film director. In 1957, he announced plans to build a modern theatre, using the open platform stage, and to be situated at Puddle Dock near Blackfriars—the first theatre to rise within City of London limits in more than two centuries. Since its opening, the Mermaid has drawn both public interest and critical acclaim.

Mr. Miles is appearing in Toronto as Long John Silver in a production of "Treasure Island" which he created for the Mermaid.

The first Edgar Stone lecture in the drama, given last year, was by the distinguished critic, Eric Bentley.

YORK INSTALLS PRESIDENT

York University will install its first president, Dr. Murray G. Ross, on Thursday, Jan. 24. Events of the day include a dinner, the installation ceremony, and a reception in honour of Dr. and Mrs. Ross.

The appointment of Dr. Ross as president was announced by the Board of Governors of York University on Dec. 2, 1959. For eight years Dr. Ross was associated with the University of Toronto where his original appointment was in the School of Social Work. In 1956 he was made executive assistant to the president, and one year later, vice-president, in which capacity he served with distinction, first under the late President Sidney Smith, and then, President Claude Bissell.

Invitations have been extended to universities of the Commonwealth and the United States, and many delegates are expected to be present. Several presidents of Canadian universities have indicated they will attend.

A dinner welcoming the representatives will be given in the Great Hall of Hart House at 6.15 p.m. the day of the installation.

The installation ceremony is to be held at 8.30 p.m. in Convocation Hall, University of Toronto. The Faculty of Music Choir, under the direction of Dr. Richard Johnston, will present selections written specially for the occasion by Prof. John R. Seeley of York University, and put to music by Dr. Arnold Walter, director of the Faculty of Music. Following the ceremony there is to be a reception in Hart House in honour of Dr. and Mrs. Ross.

Anyone interested in attending the ceremony and reception who has not received an invitation may contact Dr. Arthur C. Johnson, chairman of the installation committee, at York University (WA 5-8851).

3 FAIRLEYS = 3 BOOKS

Three books in a single year, each of them from a different member of the family, is the admirable record of the Barker Fairleys for 1960.

Dr. Fairley, Professor Emeritus of German in University College, has just added to his own list of publications Wilhelm Raabe: An Introduction to His Novels, a study of the 19th century German writer whom Dr. Fairley feels is thoroughly misunderstood.

Mrs. Fairley recently reached the book-sellers' lists with The Selected Writings of William Lyon Mackenzie, 1824-1837, for the most part made up of extracts never before reprinted from the Colonial Advocate and other publications.

Earlier in the year, their son, T. C. Fairley, published Sverdrup's Arctic Adventures, adapted from the Norwegian explorer's own record. Additional chapters by Mr. Fairley include the first account of how the territory charted by Sverdrup eventually came to be Canadian.

Prof. Fairley, with Prof. Boeschstein, also played the part of moral supporter to a fourth book appearing last year, written by A. Maud Holt, the widow of Prof. Geoffrey Holt, a former member of the University College German Department. It is the first English translation of Green Henry, the autobiography of the Swiss-German poet and author, Gottfried Keller.

THE PRICE OF BEING CANADIAN

Some 150 persons will gather next month to discuss The Price of Being Canadian at the seventh Winter Conference presented by the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs. The Conference takes place on campus at the Faculty Club and at the Ontario College of Education. The three speakers who will address the meeting on three occasions are Frank H. Underhill, Douglas V. LePan and Hugh MacLennan.

Opening on Friday, Feb. 24 with an hour-long CBC studio telecast, the conference continues through the Sunday afternoon. If it be assumed that there is a separate and distinct Canadian national identity, that its maintenance involves cost as well as benefits and that there is a need at this time to strike a balance, various political, cultural and economic issues must be faced. What meaning do we attach to the concept of national independence? What obstacles do we face in attempting to maintain or to enhance our independence? What price are we willing to pay?

These and other questions set out on the Friday will provide a background and framework for the groups which meet throughout the Saturday at the Faculty Club. Small discussion groups of approximately fifteen persons each will meet twice during the day. Leaders include Alexander Brady, J. M. S. Careless and Marshall McLuhan from the University of Toronto, Alan Jarvis, National Director of the Canadian Conference of the Arts, André Raynauld of the Université de Montréal and H. Scott Gordon of Carleton University. Groups will explore the several facets of the broad questions raised the previous evening, such as investment and trade; foreign policy and defence; political traditions and constitutional issues; education and broadcasting.

Each of these factors will be examined in some depth by the speakers in the afternoon. Each speaker will address one of three large groups; conferees will then have an opportunity for comment and questions.

A two-hour plenary session will be held on the Sunday afternoon at Ontario College of Education. One person will briefly summarize points raised in the small groups the previous day, and the three speakers will participate in a panel discussion followed by audience questions. The CBC will carry the first hour on television. This session will focus on the possibility of attaining the objectives we seek in the face of the costs we must meet.

In contrast to previous years, no attempt is being made to delineate specific topics for the groups or for the plenary session. Persons registering are being asked to indicate preference as among political, cultural and economic aspects, all of which necessarily overlap.

The Institute hopes that the theme together with the new format, designed to enhance the exchange of ideas and good discussion, always the primary objectives of CIPA conferences, will be of interest to faculty members and students. Registration forms are available at the Faculty Club and at the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs, 244 St. George Street, Toronto.

TV LECTURES PROSPER

The television lecture series, "Beginning Russian", has attracted far more serious public interest than had been expected even by optimists. Nearly 1,500 study guides and textbooks have been sold to viewers of the 48 half-hour lectures, which are being produced jointly by the University and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. The text for the series is the same one used for elementary Russian courses on campus.

The series has received financial support also—a $4,500 grant from the Junior League of Toronto to help defray instructional and administrative costs borne by the University. League members also are following the series as a pilot group reporting on its success.
